Comments:

1.13 does not apply

1.19 we are not aware that professional body criteria apply

1.23 we do not understand what "procedures are applied" means – what procedures?

Provide information on:

1. Employability records

The external evaluation team was not provided with exact statistics. Many of the 132 Graduates are employed in the public sector as well as in private schools. Some former students are currently employed in the Department of Education. Graduates have a higher chance of securing a teaching position due to dual listings as primary and special teachers.

2. Pass rate per course/semester

The exact pass rate was not discussed, but discussions made the external evaluation team assume that it is very high.

3. The correspondence of exams' and assignments' content to the level of the programme and the number of ECTS

The external evaluation team was not able to check the exams and assignments, since we do not read Greek and we were not provided with the comments of the external examiners of the assignments and dissertations.

Findings

A short description of the situation in the Higher Education Institution (HEI), based on elements from the application for external evaluation and on findings from the onsite visit.

The quality assurance of the MA programme is publicly available. There are codes of ethics, rules and regulations and anti-plagiarism system. The quality assurance supports teaching staff and students to take their responsibilities in quality assurance. There was evidence of this in the interviews. The policy guards against discrimination against students and staff. The course content and aim of the MA course are provided in the University of Cyprus prospectus. The four purposes of Higher Education by the Council of Europe were identified in the MA Course. The Master Programme is subject to a formal institutional approval process. The MA qualification is in accordance with the National Qualification Framework for Higher Education.

Strengths

A list of strengths, e.g. examples of good practices, achievements, innovative solutions etc.

There are good links with stakeholders, there is an active student inclusion group, involving parents and schoolteachers, artists are brought in, students visits organised. Lecturers and professors are sensitive to students' views and needs. External academics are invited regularly to contribute to the courses and programme. There is evidence that the course sequence enables smooth student progression. The use of school case studies in the programme provided well-structured placement opportunities. The focus on special and inclusive education, but a future change in the list system of the ministry might lead to a lower demand in course places. However, there is such a large pool of applicants, this should not be a problem. It seems that unemployment and financial crisis seems to work in their favour (e.g. to put their names on two lists improves their chances of securing a job in public schools). The team seem confident about the programme's future, which raises the question why they are not admitting more students.

Areas of improvement and recommendations

A list of problem areas to be dealt with, followed by or linked to the recommendations of how to improve the situation.

The course purposes, knowledge learning outcomes are listed, but these could be complemented with personal learning outcomes. It is not known how decisions are taken on new courses; this procedure could be made more transparent. Though the ECTS credits were listed, there was a discrepancy between the prospectus and the information provided (120 ECTS vs. 90 ECTS). Since most students work in schools outside the course; there is an opportunity to enhance or extend placement assignment. This could take the form of supervised pedagogical assignments. The course references are extensive in English and Greek, suggesting that the focus is both local and international. However, the references do not include enough critical discourse about inclusion and an up-to-date review of the international literature. This could be introduced as an assignment to the students. The students could engage in critical discourse between the inclusion ideals and the realities in Cypriot schools. We were unsure of the extent of the use of peer collaborative review in the periodic review of the programme. We were also unsure of the regularity of the course review and revision. We found no public information about the interviews of applicants; we were unsure of the selection criteria used and whether they are made transparent. Though graduates are told what they will be able to do, there are no explicit intended learning outcomes made public. We were not clear about how much information was given publicly about the teaching and learning and assessment procedures, pass rates, learning opportunities available for students and employment information.

The programme team could consider to what extent the design of the MA programme is consistent with the European Qualification Framework regarding a MA qualification that does not include dissertation (MA Thesis).

Comments:

2.14: we do not know enough about the examination part of the course to pass a judgment

2.16: not able to judge

Findings

A short description of the situation in the Higher Education Institution (HEI), based on elements from the application for external evaluation and on findings from the onsite visit.

This is a very individualised programme with only 15 students per year. The process of teaching and learning is flexible with students able to change modules according to their preferences and backgrounds. Students take an active role in the learning process, for example, students organised workshops and seminars. There is evidence of students undertaking independent work in the courses.

Strengths

A list of strengths, e.g. examples of good practices, achievements, innovative solutions etc.

There is a strong pioneering spirit that inspires students. There is mutual respect in the teacher-student relationship with students identifying strongly with academic staff. There are strong relationships between the academic staff team which can carry to programme into the future. Assessment allows students to show that they have achieved the intended learning outcomes. Students are given feedback, but we are uncertain about the nature of formative assessment.

Areas of improvement and recommendations

A list of problem areas to be dealt with, followed by or linked to the recommendations of how to improve the situation.

There were questions about the long-term development of the course and the leadership beyond the pioneering phase. There is a good opportunity to consider sustainability question now and in the future. More use of ICT could be considered, for example, discussion fora, wikis, development joint writing and presentations, though we recognise that online learning is reserved for the Open University. For comments on case studies, see comments under 1. A stronger link between the courses and the practical work that all students do as teachers or learning support assistants could be established. Assessment is not as transparent as it could be, based on the paperwork and documentation provided to the evaluation team. This also applies to admission criteria (see under 1.). The criteria for methods of assessment are not published enough in advance, although it might be that these are communicated verbally to the students rather than in a written format. We have little evidence about the rules of marking as well as the reliability or moderation of marking (e.g. procedures for double-checking grades, calibration of scores between academics).

- The teaching staff collaborate in the fields of teaching and research within the HEI and with partners outside (practitioners in their fields, employers, and staff members at other HEIs in Cyprus or abroad).
- Recognised visiting teaching staff participates in teaching the study programme.
- The teaching staff is regularly engaged in professional and teaching-skills training and development.
- Assessment of the teaching staff takes into account the quality of their teaching, their research activity, the development of their teaching skills and their mobility.

You may also consider the following questions:

- How are (novice) members of the teaching staff supported with regard to the development of their teaching skills? How is feedback given to members of the teaching staff regarding their teaching results and teaching skills?
- How is the teaching performance assessed? How does their teaching performance affect their remuneration, evaluation and/or selection?
- Is teaching connected with research?
- Does the HEI involve visiting teaching staff from other HEIs in Cyprus and abroad?
- What is the number, workload, qualifications and status of the teaching staff (rank, full/part timers)?
- Is student evaluation conducted on the teaching staff? If yes, have the results of student feedback been analysed and taken into account, and how (e.g., when planning in-service training for the teaching staff)?

Findings

A short description of the situation in the Higher Education Institution (HEI), based on elements from the application for external evaluation and on findings from the onsite visit.

We assume from the university website that there are transparent and clear procedures for recruiting teaching staff although we do not have detailed information. They have a sufficient number of permanent staff. There was evidence of staff collaborating in teaching and research with other HEI partners in Cyprus and abroad. The course regularly invites international staff to participate in their seminar programme. On the basis of the programme's staff's CVs, the staff are adequately qualified to ensure the quality of teaching and learning. There is a university teaching and learning centre which engages academics who teach the MA programme in teaching skill training and development.

Strengths

A list of strengths, e.g. examples of good practices, achievements, innovative solutions etc.

There are many strengths identified in the above description (see above). There is a good, highly personalised relationship between academic staff and students. The academic staff have been successful in securing external funding and attracting international colleagues to share the research and teaching.

Areas of improvement and recommendations

A list of problem areas to be dealt with, followed by or linked to the recommendations of how to improve the situation.

We did not know whether there is a formal assessment process for teaching staff, however, there is course evaluation and we assume that this is used to review and improve teaching quality. There could be more explicit and transparent criteria for recruitment and development of teaching staff. In addition, there was not enough explicit information about the assessment of staff's quality of teaching and research.

4.5. we don't know

Findings

A short description of the situation in the Higher Education Institution (HEI), based on elements from the application for external evaluation and on findings from the onsite visit.

There are published regulations about student admission, progression and certification. The programme has clear admission processes, but there were some questions about the transparency of the admission criteria used in the interviews. Students receive certifications with explanation of their qualifications they have achieved. There are mechanisms for complaint management and dispute resolution (Section 1.1.12 in the Postgraduate Study Rules).

Strengths

A list of strengths, e.g. examples of good practices, achievements, innovative solutions etc.

The students we interviewed expressed strong satisfaction with the programme. High value is placed on the recognition of previous staff and student experience. Students' mobility is promoted, although the numbers involved are not clear. There seems to be a strong emphasis on student support and welfare services. The university provides support for students with disabilities through central services. The programme covers or provides for the needs of students with disabilities or disadvantaged backgrounds. Student mobility is encouraged in the form of travel, attending conferences and financial support. Prior learning and work experience are taken into account in the admission process based on what we learned in the staff interviews.

Areas of improvement and recommendations

A list of problem areas to be dealt with, followed by or linked to the recommendations of how to improve the situation.

More transparent admission criteria used in interviews could be developed and published. More detailed information is required about how students' progress through the programme, success and drop-out rates. More information about the career paths of graduates, and how this is collected and analysed would be helpful in raising the public image of the course. More transparent information on student mobility could be provided. Though there are central mechanisms for student appeal, we do not know how these apply to this particular course.

You may also consider the following questions:

- Evaluate the supply of teaching materials and equipment (including teaching labs, expendable materials, etc.), the condition of classrooms, adequacy of financial resources to conduct the study programme and achieve its objectives. What needs to be supplemented/ improved?
- What is the feedback from the teaching staff on the availability of teaching materials, classrooms, etc.?
- Are the resources in accordance with actual (changing) needs and contemporary requirements? How is the effectiveness of using resources ensured?
- What are the resource-related trends and future risks (risks arising from changing numbers of students, obsolescence of teaching equipment, etc.)? How are these trends taken into account and how are the risks mitigated?

Findings

A short description of the situation in the Higher Education Institution (HEI), based on elements from the application for external evaluation and on findings from the onsite visit.

From the evidence presented, adequate and readily accessible resources seem to be available. We assume that in changing circumstances available resources are still adequate. We consider the resources fit-for-purpose and students are informed about the services available for them. Teaching staff are involved in the acquiring of materials and resources.

Strengths

D. Conclusions and final remarks

Please provide constructive conclusions and final remarks which may form the basis upon which improvements of the quality of the programme of study under review may be achieved, with emphasis on the correspondence with the EQF.

In conclusion, in all general areas, we found the MA programme compliant with the standards. In most cases on the individual standards, we have given individual ratings of 4 or 5, in very few places we have given a rating of 3 with remarks on how to improve the current situation. Our recommendation is to accredit the MA programme “Special and Inclusive Education”.

We would like to express our thanks to the Cyprus Agency of Quality Assurance and Accreditation in Higher Education, to the management of the university, to the academic and administrative staff as well as to the students.
